

Ezekiel 37:1-14

Lent 5, March 26, 2023
Pastor Sam Rodebaugh

The hand of the LORD was upon me, and he brought me out in the Spirit of the LORD and set me down in the middle of the valley; it was full of bones. <sup>2</sup> And he led me around among them, and behold, there were very many on the surface of the valley, and behold, they were very dry. <sup>3</sup> And he said to me, "Son of man, can these bones live?" And I answered, "O Lord GOD, you know." <sup>4</sup> Then he said to me, "Prophecy over these bones, and say to them, O dry bones, hear the word of the LORD. <sup>5</sup> Thus says the Lord GOD to these bones: Behold, I will cause breath to enter you, and you shall live. <sup>6</sup> And I will lay sinews upon you, and will cause flesh to come upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath in you, and you shall live, and you shall know that I am the LORD." <sup>7</sup> So I prophesied as I was commanded. And as I prophesied, there was a sound, and behold, a rattling, and the bones came together, bone to its bone. <sup>8</sup> And I looked, and behold, there were sinews on them, and flesh had come upon them, and skin had covered them. But there was no breath in them. <sup>9</sup> Then he said to me, "Prophecy to the breath; prophecy, son of man, and say to the breath, Thus says the Lord GOD: Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe on these slain, that they may live." <sup>10</sup> So I prophesied as he commanded me, and the breath came into them, and they lived and stood on their feet, an exceedingly great army. <sup>11</sup> Then he said to me, "Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. Behold, they say, 'Our bones are dried up, and our hope is lost; we are indeed cut off.' <sup>12</sup> Therefore prophecy, and say to them, Thus says the Lord GOD: Behold, I will open your graves and raise you from your graves, O my people. And I will bring you into the land of Israel. <sup>13</sup> And you shall know that I am the LORD, when I open your graves, and raise you from your graves, O my people. <sup>14</sup> And I will put my Spirit within you, and you shall live, and I will place you in your own land. Then you shall know that I am the LORD; I have spoken, and I will do it, declares the LORD."

If you've spent any time watching crime dramas or murder mysteries, you've probably caught onto their frequently used formula. There's been a murder of some kind, the team of investigators show up, and over the course of 42-minutes of television, the bad guy is caught. There's one particular show that follows this same basic structure, but it begins a little differently. It's a show called, "Bones." Now, I've never seen the show, but I've seen enough commercials through the years to get the gist. I believe that the show always starts with a pile of bones. The remains are too far removed from the time of death for regular investigators to come in and do their work, so they call in Dr. Temperance Brennan, nicknamed "Bones," who is a forensic anthropologist who can study the bones and solve the mystery. Her tagline is, "The bones always tell a story."

God might say the same. After all, it was using a vision of bones that God gave to the prophet Ezekiel the lesson in our text this morning. He had Ezekiel playing the part of forensic anthropologist, showing him a field of dry, dead bones. Ezekiel might have wanted to look away from that morbid scene, but God wanted him to watch to see what would happen next, for, in the words of our theme: The Bones Tell Our Story.

Now, as a dad of several young boys, I frequently spend time watching my kids do things that I don't think they'll be able to do. There's always some feat of strength or athleticism or coordination going on that I'm pretty sure is beyond their current means. And I always find myself weighing out two options, and since many of you are parents, you probably know what the options are: you either step in and do it for them so that it can just be over and done with, or you let them struggle with it and learn and be better equipped the next time. Which choice I make usually is determined by how much time I have, or rather, how patient I'm feeling in that moment. But I think we'd all agree that, in general, letting a person struggle through the task, trying to figure it out for themselves—to work and to fail and to try again—that's going to be much better for them in the long-run.

And that's true in most areas of life: in sports, in schoolwork, in everyday tasks. But there's one area of life where, if a person is left only to their own devices, they will fail every single time. And that's in our spiritual lives. Turning back to the bones in our text, they tell us story about ourselves. Picking up at verse 1: "The hand of the LORD was upon me, and he brought me out in the Spirit of the LORD and set me down in the middle of the valley; it was full of bones. And he led me around among them, and behold, there were very many on the surface of the valley, and behold, they were very dry."

So, Ezekiel comes across these bones, and these aren't fresh kills or anything like that. They've been there for a long time as evidenced by the fact that these bones are very dry. Old, dead bones. But Ezekiel doesn't need to perform any forensic investigation upon the corpses, for God tells Ezekiel everything he needs to know. God says, in verse 11, "Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. Behold, they say, 'Our bones are dried up, and our hope is lost; we are indeed cut off.'"

So, these bones actually told the story of a people that were still alive. That was the people of Israel, a nation who by-in-large had determined to set about their spiritual lives with a do-it-yourself strategy. They picked and chose what gods they wanted to worship, and their additional worship of the one true God involved nothing resembling actual faith. Instead, it was a religion based upon, "I'll go through all these motions for God, and that should be good enough." But they were mistaken. And because of their faithlessness and total lack of reliance on God, the Lord God sent them a wake-up call. He allowed the ruthless Babylonian armies to come and destroy their homes and take them hostage to Babylon. There they were imprisoned and forced into labor camps and stripped of any national identity, and in general were reminded that by themselves they were as helpless as a field of dry dead bones. Locked away in Babylon, they cried in despair, "Our bones are dried up, and our hope is lost; we are indeed cut off."

Do you ever feel like the children of Israel did? Have things turned out for you the way that you envisioned them? Perhaps the problems in your life seem to have surpassed the joys. The money flowing in can't keep up with the money flowing out. Society keeps rapidly changing, and you find yourself more and more feeling like a stranger in your own country. A feeling of helplessness overcomes you, and maybe you too want to cry out, "Our bones are dried up, and our hope is lost."

Well, in reference to this field of bones, God asks Ezekiel this searching question, "Can these bones live?" I know how I would answer. Looking at a long-dead pile of bones, the answer would seem obvious. "No." Almost as obvious as the answer to that question would be when asked about our own lives. When surveying our own seemingly hopeless situations, when our confidence is shaken and any escape from our current circumstances seems to be cut off—if the question were posed about your life, "Can these bones live?" I'm afraid our answer is, more often than not, a readily-given, "No." "No, these bones cannot live. For all hope is lost."

And that would be true for anyone who would stand apart from God. That would be the story our bones would tell were God not in the picture. Hopeless, dead, incapable of doing anything. Without God we would spend this life wasting away, rotting in the stench of our own sinful flesh, hopelessly meandering toward a meaningless death and eventually, just a pile of our own dead bones.

Thankfully, we are not alone. God asks Ezekiel the question, “Can these bones live?” And rather than giving the seemingly obvious answer, Ezekiel simply entrusts it to God. “O Lord GOD, you know.”

And that was a good answer, for without God—those bones, our bones—all of them are nothing but dry bones. But WITH God, hope is restored, life is given where death once reigned! That’s the imagery which God presents in vivid detail in our text. “Then he said to me, “Prophesy over these bones, and say to them, O dry bones, hear the word of the LORD. Thus says the Lord GOD to these bones: Behold, I will cause breath to enter you, and you shall live. And I will lay sinews upon you, and will cause flesh to come upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath in you, and you shall live, and you shall know that I am the LORD.” So I prophesied as I was commanded. And as I prophesied, there was a sound, and behold, a rattling, and the bones came together, bone to its bone. And I looked, and behold, there were sinews on them, and flesh had come upon them, and skin had covered them. But there was no breath in them. Then he said to me, “Prophesy to the breath; prophesy, son of man, and say to the breath, Thus says the Lord GOD: Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe on these slain, that they may live.” So I prophesied as he commanded me, and the breath came into them, and they lived and stood on their feet, an exceedingly great army.”

I remember when the movie The Pirates of the Caribbean first came out back in 2003. I’m not sure how many of you have seen it, but involves a group of marauding zombie pirates, eternally dead because of an ancient pirate curse. They look like normal people, or normal pirates, in the daylight, but when exposed to the moonlight, they’re revealed for what they really are, just bones. Moving, walking, talking, pillaging bones of pirates. I’m not sure how well the computer-generated imagery and effects hold up some 20 years later, but at the time, that movie was state-of-the-art. Never before had anyone seen dead bones come to life with such amazing detail.

Nobody, except for Ezekiel, I suppose. Some 2500 years before The Pirates of the Caribbean came out, God was treating the prophet to a show of bones coming to life, no CGI required. And as amazed as I was at 11-years-old watching that display on the big screen, I imagine Ezekiel’s reaction must have been even greater. God commands him to speak to the bones, and he does. Bones begin skittering across the earth joining to one another, standing up at attention; once dry, dead bones being covered with tendons and ligaments and muscles and skin. “Prophesy again, Ezekiel,” and he does, and suddenly he’s no longer alone in that valley but joined by an army of living, breathing people.

Now, that would have been pretty dramatic. In this whole vision, a pile of dry, dead bones becoming a living, breathing army would seem to be the real showstopper. But in fact, in verse 6, after the sinews and flesh and skin and breath were all mentioned, the climactic thing in verse 6 is this: “And you shall know that I am the LORD.” It comes up the same way in verse 13 and in verse 14, where you have the graves being opened, people coming back to life, “And you shall know that I am the LORD.” And perhaps you know this, but oftentimes in the Bible, when God repeats Himself multiple times in a few verses, it’s because the Holy Spirit is telling us that that is the important thing to focus on.

Now it doesn't seem so dramatic, so exciting, so thrilling to come to "know the LORD," as it would be to see a bunch of dead bones rise up and become a great army. That seems much more dramatic. But in fact, here in our text, this "know[ing] the Lord" is the climactic element. The big deal isn't the big show. The big deal is people coming to know the Lord rightly.

That's why these bones tell our story. Because "know[ing] the Lord" is really the truly miraculous event of our lives as well. For we are all the same, just like those Israelites trapped in Babylon. We are all of us dry, dead bones, as Jesus says to all of us, "Apart from me you can do nothing." (John 15:5) Or as the Apostle Paul testifies, "You were dead in your trespasses and sins." (Ephesians 2:1) Here we are, an army of dry, dead bones, any hope lost long ago. We could look around us and hardly find any reason for joy or optimism at all.

But we are not alone. We are never alone. Therefore, we are not without hope. For God came to us in our hopeless situation. The Son of God walked among this army of the living dead and determined to take our place instead. He proved what the Lord God was really like, so that we may know the Lord rightly: He's the God who is not willing that any should perish. (cf. 2 Peter 3:9) He's the eternally living One who desires all men to be saved and to come to the knowledge of the truth. (cf. 1 Timothy 3:4) So He restored hope to the dead by laying down His own life.

And that's the big deal. That God would come down and bring life to dry bones such as we. That God would declare to us, "I will open your graves and raise from your graves, O my people. I will put my Spirit within you, and you shall live, I will place you in your own land. Then you shall know that I am the LORD; I have spoken, and I will do it, declares the LORD." That's the big deal. That God would declare that finally and ultimately, there is enduring hope for all of us. For in this life, we could look for hopes and joys that only end up disappointing us, but God promises us new life. The Spirit of God, the breath of life has come to us now. Our lives no longer need to be characterized by lifelessness or despair, for new life has come. We are baptized. We have life. We have been forgiven. We have hope. God has spoken His Word to each of our hearts, and as He has said it, it is done: "I will put my Spirit within you."

You see then, these bones tell a story. And not just any story, they tell your story. And the day will come, when God will truly open your graves and bring you to a new land as He has said. And that will not be a vision at all, but it will be the literal conclusion to your story here. Someday, your dry, dead bones, will be raised to life to dwell in the house of Lord forever. For as Jesus Christ our Savior has risen from the dead as He said, He has also said that He will raise our bones to life and take us with Him to be the living, breathing army of saints surrounding the throne of God in glory. May God grant it to each of us, in Jesus' name. Amen.

"And the peace of God, which surpasses all understanding, will guard your hearts and your minds in Christ Jesus." (Philippians 4:7) Amen.
